ABOUT

Our Short Course, non-credit earning program as designed per request (customized program) is a comprehensive program for international students offering a study about contemporary Indonesia in its different aspects, such as economy, law, arts & popular culture, history, social, politics, urban studies, sustainable development, tropical disease, public health, and pharmacy while learning and experiencing Indonesian language and culture.

The program offers a series of courses on numerous aspects as requested including Indonesian culture, society and politics from both historical and contemporary perspectives—covering issues such as ethnic, religious and cultural diversity, law, media and democracy, economics, as well as regional security, counter-terrorism, and global issues such as communicable diseases and resilient city—which provides fundamental grounds for more advanced learning on Indonesia and opportunities for comparative studies with the global situation. The subjects are academically delivered in an objective and balanced point of views.

It also provides students with beginner's skill in the Indonesian language in addition to an excursion program to several places of interest such as Taman Mini Indonesia Indah, traditional dance and music workshops, and the Istiqlal Mosque, which introduces students to the diversity of Indonesian social and cultural life.

A weekend home stay program that provides an opportunity for immersion into the everyday life of Indonesian families in a realistic setting is available as an integrated part of the study program.

OBJECTIVE

The purpose is to equip the students with a breadth of knowledge about Indonesia, and with relevant approaches to analyze various social, cultural, economic, political, science and health issues related to Indonesia.

PARTICIPANTS

The program is designed for undergraduate and first-year postgraduate students (master's and doctoral levels) in various subjects on health cluster, science and technology as well as social humanities.

Students are challenged to discuss their views and gain new insights with lecturers, researchers, and professors knowledgeable about the issues. Furthermore, there are study trips for students in the forms of cultural excursion, home stay and workshops of Indonesian culture.
